

BANK TO PAY $19,000

5% Pct. Dividend Is Announced Here for Next Tuesday

Claimants Asked to Call for Deposits at Banking Office

RECOVERY IS 86 1/2 %

Rise of Land and Timber Values Helps Make New Payment

Payment of an additional dividend of 5 1/2 per cent on the deposits of the closed Arkansas Bank & Trust Co., beginning probably next Tuesday was announced Wednesday noon by W. S. Atkins, liquidating agent.

The new payment will bring total recovery for the depositors to 86 1/2 per cent.

The 5 1/2 per cent dividend will amount to approximately $19,000, and claimants should collect their checks at the office of the closed bank, Mr. Atkins said.

The rise in land and timber values in recent years has contributed much to the present dividend, Mr. Atkins pointed out.

"After the bank closed November 17, 1930, it had 8,000 acres of land and timber," he said. "We have been able to dispose of some of this at twice the figure it would have commanded had the sales been made in the years immediately following the closing."

Nazi Aides Hold Key to Chinese National Defense

Germany Leans in Spirit Toward Japs—But Chinese Have Money

Economic Advantage Is Weighed Against Nazi Treaty With Japan

By NEA Service.

SHANGHAI, China.—In a very real sense, Adolf Hitler's government may be a deciding factor in the bitter Sino-Japanese conflict, not through actual intervention but by espionage and possible supply of munitions to one side or the other. Both Japan and China are playing desperately for German friendship.

Most important is the fact that "Chiang Kai-shek's Own Army"—the finest fighting unit in the Orient—is trained and directed by Germans.

Ten years ago a mission of officers from the former German Imperial Army was employed by the generalissimo to build a model army of 300,000 men.

Then in 1933, Gen. Hans von Seeckt, founder of the famous Reichswehr, came to China to make further improvements in the divisions of goose-stepping orientals.

Like a Steel Whip

He cut down the force to 250,000 men, making of them a highly mechanized, highly mobile and highly disciplined force.

Like the Reichswehr before General von Blomberg insisted on padding it out to 450,000 men, Chiang's army is operated on the principle of a steel whip, striking swiftly and springing back ready for another attack.

There are now nearly 100 German advisers to Chiang Kai-shek's men. Teutonic advice is evident wherever these forces take the field. They build zigzag trenches, machine-gun nests, and are able to deliver a killing attack and retreat with but few casualties.

Safely in the Rear

Where great armies of men are massed, Chiang's troops are safely in the rear, their guns trained on the poorly trained and equipped provincial troops who might try to retreat.

It is an open secret that the Germans have told Chiang he can defend the Yangtze valley successfully. The blockade of the river, preventing Japanese light cruisers and destroyers from taking Nanking, Kiukiang, and Hankow by naval attack, was the first step.

None but the Chinese high command and their German advisers know what else is contemplated. The Japanese would give almost anything

MIND Your MANNERS

Test your knowledge of correct social usage by answering the following questions, then checking against the authoritative answers below:

1. Is the introduction, "Mr. Moore, let me make you acquainted with Mr. Short," correct?

2. What should a person reply to one who says, "I am glad to have met you?"

3. In introducing a stranger to a group of friends, is it necessary to repeat his name at each introduction?

4. Is it correct for a girl to introduce a sister whose name is the same as her own as "Miss Young"? 5. May a man correctly introduce two men by saying, "Mr. Jones, shake hands with Mr. Smith?"

What would you do if—

You are having lunch in a restaurant with several friends and someone stops at your table a moment for a word with you—

(a) Introduce him to each of your friends?

(b) Make no introductions?

(c) Say to your friends, "This is Mr. Gray?"

Answers

1. No. Never use "make you acquainted with."

2. "Thank you" or "Thank you. I hope that I shall see you again soon."

3. No.

4. No. She should say, "This is my sister" or "My sister, Anne."

L.R. Conference of Methodism Will Convene in Hope

84th Annual Session to Meet at Local Church Wednesday, Nov. 10

HOST ONLY 3 TIMES

Annual Sessions Held in Hope in Years 1882, 1901 and 1919

The 84th annual session of the Little Rock Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, will convene in First Methodist church, Wednesday, November 10 at 7:30 p. m.

Bishop John M. Moore, of Dallas, Texas, whose episcopal area includes the conferences in Arkansas and Missouri, will preside. The conference will continue through Sunday, November 14, when the appointments of the preachers for the coming year will be read by Bishop Moore.

Here Three Times

Hope Methodism has been host to the Little Rock Conference on three other occasions. The annual sessions were held here in 1919, 1901 and 1882. Approximately 250 delegates, including the ministers, will be present. Their entertainment will be provided for by members and friends.

The work of the conference session consists of reports by the seven presiding elders and the preachers on the work for the past year. The various boards and committees will submit reports. One of the most important things to be considered will be the election of delegates to the General Conference of the Church to be held in Birmingham, Ala., next May. At that conference the Methodist Episcopal Church, South will vote on the plan of uniting the three American Methodisms. The Methodist Episcopal and Methodist Protestant Churches have already voted in favor of the plan.

Vote on Unification

The conference will also vote its attitude toward the unification. Four conferences of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, have already voted affirmatively for the proposed plan.

The conference president will be Dr. H. C. Morrison, president of Ashbury College, Wilmore, Ky. Dr. Morrison has long been an outstanding preacher and educator in Southern Methodist ranks. He will preach twice daily on Thursday, Friday and Saturday during the sessions.

The conference session will be open to the general public. The Primary and Adult Departmental rooms will be opened into the auditorium to provide more seating capacity.

GENEVA, Switzerland.—(AP)—Japan will refuse, and ignore, even friendly mediation by the League of Nations in the Sino-Japanese conflict, Eiji Amau, Japanese minister to Switzerland, disclosed Wednesday.

Asserts Dictator Forced Wedding

American Says He Was Compelled to Wed Peruvian Senorita

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Charges that a former Peruvian dictator forced him to marry a South American senorita or else be "accidentally" shot—have been aired in a nuptial petition by Lewis M. Clarkson, former American commercial representative in Lima, Peru.

He said the dictator-president was Augusto B. Leguia, who fled the country during a revolution in 1930, was captured and died in 1932, and that Leguia compelled him to marry Mercedes de la Quintana Yuda de Ludewig 11 years ago. The woman, he said, was "known to be involved in Peruvian political intrigues and to be supported by various government officials, including the then president of the republic."

In 1925, Clarkson declared, a representative of President Leguia called him to the executive mansion, informed him that the woman was going to have a child, and threatened him with "accidental" death unless he married her. Clarkson said he had never been intimate with the woman and that she bore a child two months after they were married in the presence of four Secret Service men.

He escaped from Peru, he said, in November, 1926, when he persuaded the dictator-president to let him leave the country on the pretext of going to enlist the aid of the United States in a Peruvian-Bolivian boundary dispute.

Change in Rules Favors 3rd Term

Abrogation of Two-Thirds Rule Breaks South's Political Hold

By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON.—If President Roosevelt has a desire to run for a third term, he will be hard to stop in the Democratic convention.

Before the last political convention, circumstances would have been different. Then the southern states, together with a few from other sections, might have raised the necessary votes to stop him. They needed only one vote more than one-third.

But in the last convention the 100-year-old two-thirds rule was ended. In 1940 a simple majority of the delegates at the Democratic convention will be sufficient to nominate a candidate for President.

Not Strong Enough

That is a worrisome prospect for those southern congressmen who went home upset at the trend the New Deal has taken. Any "stop Roosevelt" movement will have to be strong. The cotton and tobacco members aren't strong enough. They would need support of substantial northern and mid-western states.

Voting in the last congress indicated some northern and southern members—with substantial exceptions—had developed a distaste for the recent course of the New Deal. They may or may not reflect the sentiment of their voters. They hope to find that out this summer.

If they had suspected there would be any third-term fever in the air so soon, they might have put up stiffer opposition at the Philadelphia convention against abrogation of the two-thirds rule. But they didn't.

Radio Rendezvous

Dieters note: Reserve the evenings of September 16 to 17. On the first night, Senator Borah of Idaho speaks on the constitution. Knowing that he is to be followed a night later by the President of the United States, who also takes to the air with a constitution speech, he really is going into training.

The President seemingly only got started at Roanoke Island with what he might wish to say about people who disagreed with him on the court and constitution issues. Undoubtedly his brightest young man, Tommy Corcoran, is busy hunting out facts and phrases for the speech. The President has cleared himself of congressional business so he can devote himself almost wholly to building that speech.

Who could have thought that 150 years after the constitution came into being it would still be page one news? Name another story that has lasted so long.

Incidentally, Borah made a bad guess on adjournment. He accepted the invitation weeks ago to speak September 16 on the constitution. He thought then that congress would be fighting about the court until September 16. As a result he is having to sweeten three weeks in Washington waiting for the date. Congress pulled out from under him August 21. And worse luck, the wing of the senate office building, where his suite is located, is not air-conditioned. At times he could poach an egg on his desk. Undoubtedly he never has.

No Recess in Public School of Experience

BECAUSE all the examples and object lessons were plunked right into his own lap in his own home—if he had one—the American citizen learned more about economic theories, laws of supply and demand, taxes and business cycles during the depression than he ever knew before.

As this knowledge was acquired, it was applied to practical problems. And helped tide the nation through dangerous periods when the balance of our entire system was endangered by suffering and discontent.

But with the return of what purports to be normalcy, people are lazying back to the attitude that they don't have to worry about the intricacies of economics or government any more, and that from now until the prosperity curve goes over the top again, anything that happens must be all for the best.

X X X

THE only error in that philosophy is that it conflicts with the facts—facts that show debts, taxes, food, clothing, and shelter costs, and government expenses mounting into a miraculous total.

In its last, long, weary session, Congress managed to make appropriations totaling nearly nine and one-half billion dollars. The amount for the public debt interest alone showed an increase of $25,000,000, and the public debt proper reached approximately $37,000,000,000.

These gigantic financial involvements are too easily waved aside by politicians with references to the great price the nation has to pay for the salvation of the happiness and prosperity of 130,000,000 people.

But the truth is that every citizen is paying directly or indirectly for this salvation, and if a man can't get it all paid off in a lifetime, his children will have to finish the job.

The exasperating ease with which public money is spent may be traced not only in national government, but through state, county and city administrations as well. The habit is not necessarily confined to one party or one period. It just seems to turn up when the man who has to take it on the chin—and on the pocketbook—lets his guard drop.

X X X

THE whole moral is that the public should maintain its defense by making its elective representatives public servants in fact as well as in Fourth of July oratorical fantasies.

When Congress appropriates more than $400,000,000 for military purposes and more than $500,000,000 for navy purposes, the voters should know why. Probe into the reasons behind state tax increases; ferret out the cause for the higher county levy or the boost in street car rates, or whatever it may be that is costing more. If you aren't satisfied with the answers, smoke out the truth. And if your public servant won't co-operate, elect one who will.

Here are bigger problems than ever, tumbling right out of every weekly pay envelope. And the way to face them is still being taught in that big, free school of practical experience.

Never Say Die Reds

WHO thought, during the last presidential campaign, that within a year the Communist party might become a convincing candidate for public pity? Reduced to competition with swastika wavers for public square attention, hustled off the ballot and generously subjected to the "silent treatment," the party, for all practical purposes, has sunk to a new low level.

One of the cruelest rebuffs came from New York's Mayor LaGuardia, who verbally manhandled an offer of Communist votes in his campaign for re-election.

Greatest producer of red herrings (made to measure) in modern electioneering history, the Communist party seems to have dwindled away to the comparable status of raggedy, weed-choked pickle factory on a deserted prairie.

But hold those tears! Death may approach but never will it completely shroud the Red body politic. Not with elections just a short haul over the horizon and campaign issues hard to find.

Iodine Controls Action of Thyroid, Conditions Sufferer for Operation

This is the 18th in a series of 20 articles by Dr. Morris Fishbein, discussing the glands of the human body.

(No. 319)

Doctors have learned that overfunctioning of the thyroid gland can be controlled to a certain extent by giving small amounts of iodine. When iodine is given, the rate of the body chemistry is at once lessened. The pulse, which has previously been rapid, becomes slower. Some of the other symptoms which are signs of overaction of the thyroid begin to disappear.

The iodine seems to help the condition, but it certainly does not cure it. For that reason, iodine is sometimes used in patients who seem to be suffering with excess action of the thyroid to help get them into a condition in which they are able to undergo suitable operation.

Operations on the thyroid gland are not particularly dangerous, provided the patient is in a good condition before the operation is performed. In most hospitals nowadays it is customary to put the toxic goiter patient to bed, watch the symptoms constantly, measure his basal metabolic rate every day or two until it becomes stabilized at a lower point. Iodine is given for from 10 to 14 days until the best possible effect is obtained. One of these effects is a drop in the high basal metabolic rate, which is usually a sign of overaction of the thyroid gland.

The surgeon may then decide to operate. At the time of the operation, he will determine how much of the thyroid gland is to be removed in order to bring about an effective result. In some cases it is customary to test the thyroid with X-ray in order to lessen its activities. In other cases, the X-ray is given as a preliminary treatment and the operation is performed afterward.

It must be remembered that the thyroid gland contains tissue much like that of other glands, and that this tissue is susceptible to the growth of tumors.

Obviously a tumor of this type is a great menace to life and health. Decision as to the nature of the tumor must be made promptly if anything effective is to be done in the way of surgery or by the use of X-ray or radium to control its growth.

NEXT: The parathyroid glands.

Ka-choo! Fall Weather Is Nothing to Sneeze at

This is the time of year to dress children with the weather. From now on there will be more varieties of climate than there are of modern shoes.

The experienced mother knows this, but the lady with her first or second toddler may not have noticed that it is sniffling time.

They used to say in grandmother's era, "Live through March and you'll live all year."

But for antics of wind and weather, hot days, cool days, wet ones and dry, I'll give the palm to September. And late August can be just as mean.

It is put-on, take-off time. When it is not, keep the children cool. When it is cool, keep the children warm. Sweaters should hang within reach at all hours of the day, and blankets at night should be handy against the tricky night breeze that shifts to any corner of the compass without warning.

Fast Cooling Worse Than Chill
Rather than make a change in underwear, it is easier to adjust clothes on the outside. But this is one thing to beware of—an over-heated child should not be allowed to shed his sweater at once when he comes in, because the lovely cool sensation he experiences as the perspiration dries off, is just what Old Man Sniffles is looking for. More children catch cold by being too warm and then suddenly cooling off, than they do by being a bit chilly.

And then there are the wet days. Don't get the idea that wet feet do not matter, because the day is warm. Wet shoes should be changed and dried. Watch the dew in the morning. Put on overshoes until the grass dries. Hoarseness Is Danger Sign

Watch out for hoarseness. This means cold in the larynx, or bronchial tubes. This child should be doubly careful not to be overheated or suddenly cooled. Therefore, he should play quietly and not race or run. Needless to say, he should be in bed if he has the slightest sign of temperature, or is coughing. Usually a cold goes down, and gives warning by being a first-rate head cold first, but not always. If the child does not seem well, or has any symptoms that stick more than a day or so, it is best to see a doctor. Fall, not to alarm you, but merely to keep you alert, is harvest time for epidemics. Best to be safe than sorry.

Change beds around if that tricky night breeze blows over small bodies with covers kicked off. Or get out the screen and place it just so. Keep other youngsters with colds away, and do likewise for your own neighbors. The day will come, I believe, when no child with a cold will be welcome in school. But that is another story.

Advice for Making People Dislike You.

These are the "Personality Days." The guide books to better living, better minds, more friends, more influence are piling up on each other. And sail the publishers can hardly keep pace with demands.

Vowed "psychologist" Irving Tressler, something ought to be done to stop this movement that threatens to engulf a nation. So Mr. Tressler wrote the very timely volume "How to Lose Friends and Alienate People" (Stackpole, $1.49).

Sole purpose of the book, Mr. Tressler warns at the outset, is to help you solve the biggest problem you face; the problem of getting rid of people who bore you in your everyday business and social life. And certainly the author knows what he's talking about, having spent a lifetime "in trying to convince friends that he is non-gregarious, always has been, and always wanted to be."

The book contains such chapters as "How to Make People Dislike You Instantly," "How to Make a Poor First Impression," "How to Bore Bored," "Tired of Your Wife?" and others in similar vein.

Typical tipoffs: "The quickest and simplest way to make people dislike you is to ask them to take care of your dog over the week-end;" "bore the other person before he bores you;" "talk about your physical troubles."

Then there's the dinner table technique. Just offer your neighbor a taste of your food from your fork or spoon, with the accompanying remark, "Does this taste funny to you, too?"

Mr. Tressler offers probably the only practical, useful working handbook in enemy-making. And even when you've laughed with him to the last bitter line you feel somehow that there's much to be said for his point of view. Take him seriously and he guarantees to give you 10 to 15 more miles a gallon and relieve you of any fat tires you get stuck with. That's a bargain at any price.—P. F.

Madman's Island

BY NARD JONES Copyright 1937 NEA Service, Inc.

CHAPTER XVIII

AS the four pressed forward, the glow ahead took form. It was a vertical thread of light perhaps seven or eight feet high, such as might come from a badly fitted door. Tom rushed toward it, leaped hard with his shoulder.

"This is it!" he cried. "Give me a hand, Mac."

As DeWitt Montgomery lunged in fanatical anger toward Kay, Grant had thrust himself between them. There was no chance to imprison the madman's arms, and in a flash the revolver was out of his pocket.

The detonation of the shot filled the little room, followed by Kay's piercing scream—but Montgomery, in his wild hatred, missed wide. Again Harper rushed, plunging through the acrid smoke, and clutching his assailant's revolver wrist with both hands.

That slight figure possessed amazing strength. With a movement of his arm he whirled Harper sharply against the table, striking mercilessly with his free hand. Back against the shelves of books, Kay watched frantically for an opening. She realized that while Grant Harper was younger and more fit, Montgomery had the power of the mad. And he still held to that menacing revolver. Suddenly she felt a pressure against her back, as though the shelves of books were moving outward! Then she was virtually pushed away by a sudden shove from them. Amazed, she turned to see two strange young men rush in through the opening—and, beyond, the frightened faces of Melita and Priscilla!

While the rescuers pinned Montgomery's arms behind him and wrested away his weapon, Melita and Priscilla ran joyfully toward Kay.

"Are you all right?" She nodded weakly. "Y-yes."

Fearful in his rage, Montgomery was threatening at the top of his lungs. As Tom Forrest thrust him into a chair he glared savagely. "I should have killed you up there behind the cabin—in stead of waiting. And I'll do it yet." His eyes burned into them all. "I'll kill every one of you."

Forrest grinned. "Not now you won't, old man." He turned to Mac and Harper. "Keep an eye on him and I'll scare up some rope. I move we truss him like a wild-cat and take him aboard the yacht to the nearest officer of the law!"

"Not a bad idea," agreed Harper, wiping his perspiring face. He looked at the section of book shelves which Mac and Tom had swung open. "But wait a minute, Tom. I think there's another one of those trick doors on the other side of the room—and someone behind it. Watch Mr. Montgomery there while Mac and I have a look."

Harper walked toward the spot where he and Kay had detected sounds beyond the wall. Picking up a fire iron from the hearth he pried between the joints while Mac tugged at one of the shelves. It opened as had the other, but at first they could see nothing beyond.

Then as the light of the library seemed to permeate the blackness they witnessed a strange sight. A young woman crouched in a corner of a mere cubicle of a room. She seemed dazed with pain, and as the door opened she hardly did more than raise her eyes.

"It's the woman we saw in the cabin!" cried Kay. "She's not dead!" Kay ran to the wounded figure, stooped quickly. "Hurry! Let's take her aboard the boat."

HALF an hour later Grant Harper entered the brightly lighted cabin of the "Mistral," rubbing his hands with satisfaction.

"That little laboratory room in the forecastle makes a swell brig," he grinned. "Mr. Montgomery will be quite safe and comfortable there until we can turn him over to the proper authorities."

Kay Dearborn got up from her chair by the settee where the injured woman lay. "She's going to be all right."

"You're sure?" Kay took his arm. "Yes. What she needs now is sleep." They left the cabin, went out onto the cool deck of the "Mistral."

"I can't understand how we ever found her alive," Harper said. "We found her none too soon. Montgomery had been very pleasant for a while—just as he played charming host to us. Then we three girls blundered onto the island the night he decided to murder her. She put up a fight, was only wounded, and Montgomery left when he saw us coming up the beach. Later he took her unconscious from the cabin. When we went back to the cabin, it was empty. Meanwhile Montgomery was busy with me—and then you."

They stood against the rail and Grant Harper looked down at her. "I'm glad I came along."

"So am I," said Kay fervently. "I owe my life to you."

For a moment he said nothing. Then: "It was sort of hoping you'd have still another reason, Kay."

SHE looked at him there on the deck of the "Mistral" and had no necessity to ask his meaning. Yet she didn't answer the implied question just then. Instead she looked out over the placid water and said, "Where're Priscilla and Melita?"

Harper laughed. "Last time I noticed them they were sitting on the after deck with Tom and Mac." He took her by the shoulders, turned her squarely around to face him. "If a skipper's crew falls in love, what does the steward do?"

"They can't fall in love," Kay said. "That would be mutiny."

"And if I insisted that your 'Chinook' follow the 'Mistral' for the rest of the cruise—would that be piracy?"

"I don't know," smiled Kay Dearborn happily. "But I like the idea!"

They sauntered aft to where the others sat watching the first faint streaks of dawn.

"I'm afraid," said Harper, "that we're not going to get much work done for the rest of the trip, boys. We've been assigned to protect the 'Chinook'."

"Sounds like a brilliant thought," mentioned Mac, and his brother was quick to second it.

"It listens good to me, too," said Priscilla. "As a navigator, Kay can steer a ship into an awful lot of trouble!"

"How about you, Melita?" "Aye, aye, sir. But you've got to be the one who tells Jim Pike what happened!"

Kay Dearborn looked at Grant. "Then we're all agreed. You know, we came on this cruise because we wanted a 'different' vacation. Here's hoping that the rest of it isn't quite as different."

But in her heart she knew that it was going to be different, indeed—so different that it would change the world for her forever, after.

Now a Six-Man Quintet Whops a Spot Right in the Hollywood Film Budget

HOLLYWOOD.—Chances are you will be hearing and seeing quite a lot of the Raymond Scott Quintet. Hearing, anyway. They are not much to look at, and for a while the movies may hide them up on the mezzanine behind the potted palms.

You see, these young men happen to be musicians, and not entertainers given to the frenzied gesticulations and grimaces of the average swing band. They just sit down and do their stuff, tooting their horns and whopping their bullfiddle and drums and piano in a very businesslike way.

In seven months the group has made only one public appearance, but that was enough to make it the talk of Hollywood and the object of a five-way bidding competition which ended in a fat contract with 20-Century Fox.

Renames Players
Scott has demonstrated some eccentric whimsicalities which tickle the movie colony. For one thing, his is the only six-man quintet in the world.

He likes the word "quintet," so he uses it, just as he likes and uses the name Scott when his name really is Warno. His saxophonist is Dave Harris, but the leader calls him "Eric Hoax" because, he says, "nobody who can play like that should have a name like 'Dave Harris.'"

Scott, who plays the piano, composes all the music for his "quintet." But he doesn't write it. The group will work on a number for weeks, and record it, before a note ever is put on paper.

Two current efforts are called "Dinner Music for a Flock of Hungry Cannibals" and "War Dance for Wooden Indians." There is a suggestion of surrealism in the title, "The Girl With the Light Blue Hair," but the theme is a jazz adaptation of an old French melody.

Scott dislikes abstract music and wants his to be as graphic as possible. That's why jazz is his medium.

Jazz permits him to build a rhythmic thing like "Power House," a waddling thing like "The Penguin," a jittery thing like "Dynamite Wagon."

"Reckless Night on Board an Ocean Liner" is rough and wild; "New Year's Eve in a Haunted House" is a ghost carnival in swing-time.

Balked at Knee Breeches
Scott, now 28, was a New Yorker from a musical family. He was shut out for an education in engineering, but changed his mind and attended the Institute of Musical Art. Next he became a staff composer for Columbia Broadcasting System.

From various radio orchestras he collected five men who liked to practice with him and try out his ideas.

They played a few sustaining programs and made some records ("Toy Trumpet," "Twilight in Turkey," "Minuet in Jazz" and "Power House") which were immediately successful.

David Selznick brought them to Hollywood for an appearance in "Nothing Sacred," but the deal went awry when he proposed costuming them in knee breeches and powdered wigs.

They were studying transcontinental timetables when an agent persuaded them to appear at the Trocadero. Said Scott: "I was scared to death, and spent two days learning to take a bow!"

There were plenty of bows to be taken, as it turned out. The Trocadero is show-shop for talent, and numerous movie big-wigs attended that night. Next day the bidding was fast, the competition bitter.

Darryl Zanuck got them. He rushed them into a couple of sequences of "All Babu Goes to Town," and has pencilled them into future musicals, for a year at least.

More than 8,000 tons of earth will be excavated at Glasgow, Scotland, to make way for the foundation of what is described as the biggest temporary building ever erected. The building, covering five acres of ground, will house the Empire Exhibition next year.

Today's Pattern

BY CAROL DAY

FOR comfort around the house, have a dress as simply made as this one (Pattern 8054) to wear. The waistline is fitted by means of darts and the whole dress is cut in two pieces so that you have only the underarm seams to stitch. The sleeves, of course, are the short, set-in style, full at top. The yoke at front adds a trim note to a dress that is otherwise as simple as an apron. Only a few yards of material are required and a few hours of time. The big advantage, however, is not as much in the money you save as in the fact that you can select the materials and colors that most become you.

The Silver Trail

Last night, Down a white walk misted with moonlight, I saw a silver trail Left by a snail. So I, going my quiet way, Would leave behind A trail of silver For those who follow after me to find. Here I shall plant a tree in a barren place, And sometime, against the stars, and elm will shake, Its silver lace. I shall slip this gnarled brown root in to the sod, And some day, out of rose's heart, will shine The face of God. I shall not trample the spider's web That spangles the grass; I shall try never to hurt a living thing As I pass; And oh, I must remember to be kind Today, Going my silver way.—Selected.

The Story of the Constitution

"Bill of Rights Follows Fight Over Ratification"

Getting the new Constitution ratified by the states was a strenuous political task. To aid in the "selling job," Hamilton, Madison and Jay prepared a set of analyses which appeared in newspapers as "The Federalist" and were widely discussed, though only about 5 per cent of the total population was eligible to vote. Universal suffrage was unknown; there were heavy property and other qualifications for voting.

Delaware was first to ratify, then Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Georgia, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Maryland and South Carolina. On June 21, 1788, New Hampshire, the ninth state, ratified, making the new government effective. There were bitter convention battles in New York and Virginia, before these major states followed. Patrick Henry led opposition in Virginia.

To win over many opponents, friends of the Constitution had to promise that a series of amendments guaranteeing personal liberty would be added. Jefferson, absent in France, was one who wrote insisting on this. So one of the first acts of the first Congress elected under the new government was to submit to the states such amendments, setting forth rights even the government must not take away.

Thus the Bill of Rights, or first 10 amendments, were so quickly added as to be virtually a part of the original Constitution. They aim at guaranteeing the rights of freedom of religion, press, assembly, speech and petition, and at protecting the citizen against unjust arrest and trial, and against search of his home without a warrant. NEXT: The Civil War amendments.

Fruit punch and white individual angel food cakes decorated with pink love birds was served to fifty guests by Miss Dora Ella Reed and Miss Marjory Downs, after which the bride-elect was presented with a beautiful two tier angel food brides cake. The bride-elect is the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Franklin Alford of Murfreesboro and Mr. Darnall is the son of Dr. and Mrs. H. H. Darnall of Columbus. The couple will make their home in Amarillo after October 1, where Mr. Darnall is connected with the Herring Hotel pharmacy.

The Canning Budget
Hempstead county home demonstration club women are making considerable progress in filling their canning budgets. Summer gardens have prospered, and the bean crop has been particularly successful. Fresh garden beans of many varieties as well as dried beans may be canned successfully at home in either tin or glass with a pressure cooker according to Mrs. R. M. Smith, extension specialist in food preservation, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture.
To can snap beans, wash thoroughly and cut in pieces. Add boiling water to cover and simmer in an open kettle about 5 minutes, or until the beans are wilted and will bend without breaking. Pack hot into containers, cover with hot water, in which the beans were precooked and add a teaspoon of salt to each quart. Process immediately at 10 pounds pressure. No. 2 pint cans require 25 minutes of processing, and No. 3 cans require 30 minutes. Pint jars require 30 minutes and quart jars 35 minutes. Only young and tender lima beans are suitable for canning. Older beans are best dried. Shell and wash the young beans; then bring them to a boil in water to cover. Pack hot into glass jars, or C-enamel, or plain tin cans. Cover with hot water and add 1 teaspoon of salt to each quart. Process immediately at 10 pounds pressure. No. 2 tin cans require 40 minutes of processing, and No. 3 need 50 minutes. Pint jars need 50 minutes, and quart jars 55 minutes. Either green or dried soybeans of any of the table varieties may be canned, but those canned green have a better flavor and color. Pick over and wash the beans. Then blanch in boiling water for 3 or 4 minutes and drain. Pack at once into glass jars, or C-enamel, or plain tin cans. Fill the containers almost full and then cover with boiling water and add 1½ teaspoons each of sugar and salt to each quart. Soybeans require longer processing than other green beans. No. 2 tin cans need 70 minutes and 10 pounds pressure, and No. 3 cans 85 minutes; pint jars need 80 minutes, and quart jars 90 minutes.
Keeping Lawn Green
If Hempstead county lawns are to be kept green through the winter, now is the time to plan for them. A lawn needs as much attention to produce grass as a meadow does to produce hay, points out.
Depressions where water collects will cause souring and mossy spots. These places can be filled now and well tamped or rolled, suggests P. T. Eton, Extension horticulturist, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture. These spots and thin spots should be well watered and thickly seeded.
Now is the proper time for the application of a commercial fertilizer containing all the necessary elements for feeding the voracious grass roots. The fertilizer should be applied at the rate of four or five pounds for each 100 square feet of lawn, and then watered thoroughly.

With the first touches of frost, bermuda grass will turn brown. Mr. Eton recommends clipping the lawn, mowing 10 pounds of rye grass to every 1,000 square feet, and watering immediately. In 10 days or two weeks the grass will appear and the spots missed in seeding can be reseeded. The grass should be cut when it is three or four inches high. By this method the lawn will stay green and form an attractive setting for the house throughout the winter, the horticulturist points out.
The Old Song
A revival of the old songs and games of Grandpa's day is not necessary in Hempstead county, since they have lived through the "jazz" age as part of the recreational tradition of the country.
Play parties, quiltings, and singing conventions are still popular.
Arkansas is rich in recreational traditions, says Miss June Donahue, Extension specialist in community activities.

"Since the earliest settlers first came to the state, Arkansas people have taken time to play and enjoy life, possible because of the many natural resources for recreational activities. Woodlands, streams, and mountains provide free facilities for rest and enjoyment.
"One of the most interesting recreational traditions in the South is the "singing convention," and it has always enjoyed great popularity in Arkansas. Through these annual affairs that are held in most counties, the love of music has been kept alive, particularly among the country people, and many old songs of early days have been preserved. Quiltings are still as frequent and enjoyable as in the days of "Aunt Dinah's Quilting Party" and the young men of the communities still look forward to seeing their "Nellie Home." Pot luck dinners, as practiced today by many groups holding all-day meetings, are a survival of the meal served to log rollers and house raisers of the early days.

Travelers, Chicks Win Opening Games

Little Rock Defeats New Orleans in 14-Inning Thriller

LITTLE ROCK, Ark.—(AP)—Pitcher Byron Humphreys' triple and Jack O'Neill's single in the 14th inning gave the Little Rock Travelers a 12 to 11 decision Tuesday night over the New Orleans Pelicans in the first game of their Shughnessy playoff series.

The Travelers banged out 19 hits and the visitors 16 in a thrill-packed game lasting more than three hours and witnessed by approximately 5,500 howling fans. The two blows that produced the winning tally came with none out. Manager Doc Prothro paraded five of his seven-man pitching staff to the mound but only Kola Sharpe, the starter, and Humphreys were effective. Sharpe went out for a pinch-hitter in the sixth. Humphreys held the Pels scoreless in the six innings he worked. New Orleans used four pitchers, Jakucki being credited with the loss.

Humphreys pitched himself out of a hole in the thirteenth when the visitors got two men on with none out.

New Orleans apparently had put the game on ice in the seventh inning with a seven-run rally featured by Roy Weatherly's triple with the sacks loaded. The Travelers came back to tie it at 11-all with a six-run outburst in the eighth, climaxed by Art Graham's homer over the right field fence with two aboard.

Chicks Win Opener

MEMPHIS, Tenn.—(AP)—Cooker Triplett's ability to hit won Memphis its Shughnessy playoff opener Tuesday night with Atlanta, 3 to 2, when the Southern Association's leading hitter singled in the sixth to send Joe Grace across the plate for the winning run. Triplett, the only Chick to get two hits, shared the spotlight with "Lefty" Mike Martynik, who, after a shaky start, silenced the Cracker bats from the third to the ninth inning. A crowd of 2,586 saw the game.

Martynik let Eddie Moore's aggression down with six hits and registered his 20th victory of the season. In the meantime the Tribe, led by Aandy Reese, Joe George and Triplett packed away at Baby Durham, chubby Cracker righthander, and finally caught up with him in the sixth. Atlanta...020 000 000—2 6 0

Johnson Deplores Feller Ballyhoo; Wouldn't Use Youngster on Sundays

CLEVELAND—(NEA)—If Walter Johnson were managing the Cleveland Indians today he wouldn't tell Bob Feller he was going to pitch until an hour before game time.

"That boy is going to be a great pitcher," the Big Train said the other day after seeing Feller in action, "but his main trouble is that he is trying too hard to do something spectacular to please the big crowds. I was just a kid and I got a lot of advertising and they used to announce a couple of days ahead that I was going to pitch so that they could capitalize on the publicity. When big crowds showed up I had a feeling that an ordinary performance wouldn't be enough. I felt I had to show them something special."

"Feller's the same way. They shouldn't pitch him just on Sundays and they ought not to ballyhoo his appearances."

Texas Aggie Squad to Be Tough Team

Coach Homer Norton Is Gunning for Conference Title This Season

COLLEGE STATION, Texas.—(AP)—Willow-hipped Dick Todd is ready to deliver the goods, down, at Texas A. and M.

Weighted down by more publicity than any sophomore ever carried in the Southwest Conference, Todd, nevertheless, came through last year. Only a concussion suffered in the Southern Methodist game, which kept him on the sidelines for weeks, slowed him down.

"He's looser, shifter and headier than ever before," quoth Coach Homer Norton as he watched him wiggle away on a tackle thrust. "Furthermore, he has his passing arm 'in the groove' and will do most of our throwing and kicking."

The timid, 175-pound halfback, who came to college as the high school back who scored nearly 700 points in three years, will get the park of a giant Aggie machine expected to reach its highest peak in a decade.

Two complete backfields, "most of them just about as good as the next one," relieve Norton of offensive worries.

Slender, dangerous Dick Vitek, quite a runner in his own right, again will pilot the club from quarterback while Todd and Jim Shockey, the southpaw passing expert, will handle the halfbacks. In the fullback position is a comparative newcomer, rugged Karl Steffens, 192-pounder whose spring work and early fall practice has lifted him right on the first string.

Fast and powerful, Steffens, who failed to letter last year, will be the defensive bulwark.

Norton admitted that the first four would be stronger offensively with Bob Nestrta in Steffens' position and indicated there would be considerable alternating between the two. He named Nestrta on his "B" squad, however, along with Waleman Price, a tow-headed sophomore who looks best when he is releasing passes; Bill Audish, 200-pound sophomore fullback; and Owen (Slick) Rogers, believed by many to be as tricky as Todd with a ball under his arm.

Big, well-conditioned and rough, the line, which will average slightly above 200 pounds, is one that Coach Norton will stack up against any wall in the conference.

"Just show me two finer guards in the nation than Joe Routh, our all-America last year, and Virgil Jones, one of the cleverest defensive linemen I've ever watched," chirped Norton. "I don't believe you'll find them." Routh, a burly 200-pounder "who

"With his punch he'd be champion if he didn't faint at the sight of blood."

Tigers Pitch In to Aid Charlie

DETROIT—(NEA)—Charlie Gehringer's pitching teammates on the Detroit Tigers recently did all they could to help him in his fight for the American League batting championship.

They practically eliminated Cecil Travis, Washington shortstop who had been one of Gehringer's chief rivals, by holding him to two hits in 20 times at bat during the three-game series with the Nationals.

Travis saw his average slump down to .348, 35 points behind Gehringer whose closest rivals now are Lou Gehrig and Joe DiMaggio of the New York Yankees.

doesn't love anybody once he gets on that field," and Jones, expert diagnoser of pass plays from his line-backing post, will be flanked at the tackles by Roy Young all-conference giant of '36 and either Joe Boyd, Bill Minnock or George Branson. It's a three-way scrap between those last named and even Norton isn't sure who will make the grade.

Three ends are available for the first string, and Norton again isn't certain who they will be. Rankin Britt, 215-pounder, better and faster than he was last year; Bruno Schroeder, one-time first string fullback who laid out last year; and Bill Beago, demon pass snagger, are his best bets.

"There's no cause to worry about center, for there Stormy Zed Coston, six foot, two inch, 220-pound junior who has never been injured, will be stationed. He is also due to do some punting—Norton's major worry."

If Todd, Nestrta, Steffens and Shockey don't come through in the kicking department, it is likely Coston will be pulled out of the line on fourth down kicks, thus causing Young to shift over from a tackle for the snapback. Norton, however, doesn't want to resort to such a switch unless it is imperative.

Siki Scores K. O. in Second Round

Uppercut to Jaw Sends Preacher Walker to Floor for Count

A surprise second-round knockout by Battling Siki over Preacher Walker featured the all-fight card at the South Walnut street arena Tuesday night.

Walker, a two-to-one favorite, was counted out in the middle of the second round when Siki connected with a right uppercut flush on the jaw. Siki looked impressive in the opening round when he sent Walker to the floor for the count of five.

After scoring five consecutive knockouts, Pinkie Carrigan, hard-hitting negro middleweight, was stopped by George Murray of Spring Hill. The bout, going the scheduled four rounds, ended in a draw. Murray's style of fighting seemed puzzling to Carrigan throughout the fight.

Milton Powell of Patmos won an easy decision over J. T. Fulton of the Alton CCC camp. Powell had the advantage in weight, height and reach and was not extended to score a victory over the Alton recruit.

Jolly Witherspoon won a three-round decision over Doyle Lindsey in the opening preliminary.

Dennis Richards, referee, stopped the second fight of the night between D. K. Carson and Buddy Legans, negroes, and ordered them from the ring. The bout was declared a no-contest. Neither of the fighters showed much spirit or inclination to fight.

Red's Ramps Defy Sluggers

CINCINNATI—(NEA)—The ramps of Crosley Field, home of the Cincinnati Reds, have been too much for two of the National League's mightiest sluggers.

Joe Medwick of the Cardinals and Ripper Collins of the Cubs have both rapped out home runs in every park in the league except at Redland Field. Medwick won't have another chance this season at the Reds' fences, but Collins is expected to be in uniform when the Cubs visit Cincinnati during the last week of the campaign.

Urges Germans to "See the World"

Hitler Himself Stays at Home, Urges Country-men to Travel

By W. O. Werper
AP Foreign Service
BERLIN—Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler, who almost never sets foot outside the Fatherland, is the patron and promoter of foreign travel for German workmen.

In the last three years, tens of thousands of German coal miners, carpenters and factory workers, who never before had seen the sea have cruised to Madeira or the Norwegian fjords since the Nazi Kraft-Durch-Freude (Strength Through Joy) vacation trips began.

Cheap, But Not Free
These are not free trips. The miner or factory workers buys coupons and pastes them in a book the year long, saving up for the big event. The government's contribution is organization, special rates—and pressure on employers for vacations with pay.

The upshot is that the average cost of a week's cruise to Norway, including railroad fare to and from the port of embarkation, food and entertain-to know and they are making every effort to find out. Nothing He Can Do That is what worries Gen. Chiang Kai-shek. Germany and Japan have an "anti-communist" agreement, which probably includes military clauses. It would be comparatively simple for Hitler to bring pressure on Chiang's advisers to turn over China's plans for defense. And there is really nothing Chiang can do to guard against this possibility.

The munitions problem is much the same story. China has in recent years bought great quantities of German rifles, machine-guns, whippet tanks, and torpedo launches. Will Germany continue to supply these necessities of war? Will she stop the trade to China, or will she divert the traffic to Japan?

China Has Money
There is this to be considered, Germany is desperate for money. Her trade with China is large, but her business with Japan—especially under the Manchurian-German trade agreement—has been disappointing. China has the money, millions of dollars in cash in England and America, and it looks good to Germany. China needs munitions badly, but Japan makes most of her own. And so in the final analysis, money will probably dictate the German policy. If Hitler accepts Chinese millions for munitions, it is extremely unlikely that he will try to upset Chiang's military plans.

Army Critics Face

bunkers. General William Mitchell, General Smedley D. Butler and General Johnson Hagood. Mitchell is dead. The other two are doing nicely.

Mitchell began by an attempt at debunking the navy as a first line of defense. He said the navy in future wars would flee for cover like rats to escape bombing planes. He offered to show the navy how a good bombing plane could sink a naval vessel. The offer wasn't accepted.

He became so furiously critical of his supporters for their failure to recognize the air force as he thought it ought to be that he ultimately was court-martialed and suspended for five years on half pay. He resigned but continued to bombard the military management verbally and in many published articles.

His old friend, the late Senator Joe Robinson, tried to get him retirement pay but Mitchell died without it.

Butler Entertains Senate
General Smedley D. Butler of the marines had his turn. While the military appropriations were swelling toward the billion dollar level, he said invasion of this country was "impossible." There aren't ships enough, he said, to bring to American shores a landing party big enough to beat us.

He also took time out to tilt the senate two years ago with a story of the "battle of Russell's run." Butler said General Russell, who was up for confirmation by the senate as marine commandant, had been frightened with his battalion almost into a panic at Vera Cruz in 1914 "by the appearance of a lone Mexican with a white flag." General Russell denied that, was confirmed, and Butler and his story were taken under fire.

General Hagood long has criticized the army's service of supply as antiquated and cumbersome. Soldierly shanks quivered at his proposal that the navy be bought in overalls because they could be supplied quickly in quantity. He capped his criticism by referring to WPA funds as "stage money," and soon afterward concluded he would be more comfortable out of the army than in it.

Thick, too, must be the skin of the gentleman who takes a fling at veterans' benefits. So far only youngsters have done that very much. Remember the "Veterans of Future Wars?" and the "Gold Star Mothers of Future Wars?"

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

Without Calomel—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas builds up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks pink.

Laxatives are only makeshifts. A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

THIS CURIOUS WORLD

By William Ferguson

A LARGE DINOSAUR

DUG UP IN UTAH, WAS PLACED IN THREE SEPARATE MUSEUMS... HIS HEAD AND NECK IN ONE, HIS BODY IN ANOTHER, AND HIS TAIL IN A THIRD! A FOURTH MUSEUM FINALLY TRADED FOR ALL OF THE PARTS, AND THE MONSTER WAS REUNITED.

"WRITING ROCK"

DIVIDE COUNTY, N. DAKOTA.

SO FAR, THERE IS NO ACCEPTED TRANSLATION OF THE CURIOUS CARVINGS INSCRIBED ON ITS SIDES.

AT the present time, rocket-mail service is not feasible for extensive operation, but it can be carried on satisfactorily under certain conditions and requirements. It is likely rockets will serve in many capacities in the very near future.
